NEWSPAPER FOLLY.

That was a striking truth which Mr. Robert White included in the paper which he read before the National Editorial association on Thursday. "People don't care what the editor of a paper thinks about his odious contemporary who is running an opposition journal. They attach no more importance to it than they do to the feelings of the butcher towards the baker."

The object of a newspaper is the publishing of news, and there is room in this direction for all the surplus energy that is lying around the newspaper office. The editor who employs his talents and space in abusing his contemporary and criticising the manner in which some other paper is conducted is very apt to be neglecting matter of more importance to himself and his subscribers.

Fortunately for all concerned the view put forth by Mr. White is the one accepted by reputable modern newspapers, and the old-fashioned way of abuse and fault-finding is now almost entirely confined to backwoods weeklies and amateur journalists.

HOME RULE PROGRESS.

The adjournment of the discussion on the Home Rule bill until after the Whitsuntide holidays affords a short breathing space to the contesting hosts, and an opportunity to consider progress. The Conservatives will point with satisfaction to the adoption of a clause asserting the supremacy of the Imperial Parliament, and scorn the Liberal announcement that there was never any question in regard to the principle there embodied. Outside of this however the Conservatives have no room for self congratulation. While their opposition has been ingenious and stubborn, it has not been successful, and seems to be losing rather than gaining strength.

On the other hand the Liberals can display actual accomplishments in the passage of two clauses, one of them involving the vital principle of the bill, the establishment of an Irish Parliament.

So far the advantage seems to be distinctly with the Liberals.

AN EXAMPLE FROM CHINA.

If the man in the moon for instance were looking down upon the earth, and observing the relations between China and the United States, he might perhaps make a mistake in deciding which is the Christian and civilized nation and which the heathen and barbarous one. Certain it is that whether we judge actions by the strict morality of the pagan philosophers or by the gentler precepts of the New Testament, on a trial of recent actions towards each other, the Chinese government would have a better standing before any impartial tribunal than that of the United States.

Because China has set a wise example of forbearance, as announced by the declaration of her minister at Washington that no reprisals would follow the execution of the Geary law, it does not justify that iniquitous measure. It remains a shame and a disgrace to this country and will do so until it is repealed.

UNCLE SAM'S WATCH DOG.

In the Washington dispatches of the past few days there have been a number of pleasing items, bits of news which afforded satisfaction to the friends of good government regardless of party throughout the country. But of them all none is quite so pleasing as the announcement that Mr. Holman is to be removed from the Committee on Appropriations and put in some place where his peculiar talents can be exercised without so much harm to public interests.

With a considerable amount of ability, a strong personal influence and an acquaintance with public affairs and public men that ought to teach him better, Mr. Holman has for a number of years constituted himself a watch dog of the treasury and, by blocking needed appropriations for various important objects, has done an incalculable amount of harm and incidentally some good. To carry out the metaphor, the "watch dog" has become a nuisance, seriously interfering with the business of his master and annoying the customers and friends who come to the house to visit and to do business. It is a matter for regret that a man with Mr. Holman's talents does not employ them to better advantage, but since he does not, the only thing to be done is to put him where he cannot do so much harm.

Adjutant-General Artz of Kansas, having escaped from the majesty of Colorado law, signalized his elevation to the Kansas militia by an attempt to use that arm of the State government to enforce illegal usurpation and to coerce the representatives of the people. Failing in this he evolved the brilliant scheme of organizing an armed body of men, to be known as "provost guards" for the declared purpose of accomplishing the violation of the laws whenever they should interfere with the purposes of the party of which Mr. Artz is a member. Only the mind of a Populist of the Artz variety could have conceived the idea of the maintenance of popular government by the help of a standing army, and how made an attempt to put it into serious practice. The regular militia were guilty of no acts of oppression or tyranny, but they properly refused to be made implements for such acts under an authority acting contrary to the law, and with this as his excuse Mr. Artz gravely asks the State government to sanction the establishment of an armed body of certain men to be held in readiness as a standing army for the service of the Populists. The refusal of the State Militia board to sanction it is gratifying, probably settles the matter, and Artz's provost guards shall probably hear no more of the Provisional Guards. It would be well for Kansas if we could say as much for Mr. Artz.

Since Americans began to the World's Fair have been put to very serious inconvenience by the recent bank failures in that country. Arriving in New Orleans or San Francisco with ample funds they have found themselves almost penniless, having only on their letters of credit, and in some instances have found that the banks upon which they were dependent had failed and they were without resources. The object lesson is a valuable one. This is the exact condition of affairs that prevailed in this country under the old State bank system, and such experiences are likely to be frequent here if it is again revived.

Chancellor William has made another speech on the Army bill which is less open to criticism than his former outbursts. Taken to itself the declaration that German unity is necessary to the existence of the Fatherland is one in which all German patriots may coincide. But a great deal depends on the point of view, and from the point of view of the Emperor, German unity means simply unquestioning assent to imperial measures, and an unfaltering obedience to the imperial will.

The Infanta Eulalia has arrived in New York, and questions of Precedence and Royal Etiquette may be expected to form a staple topic of conversation for some time to come. By the way it is better to say "Yoo-lah-le-ah," with the accent on the next to the last syllable, rather than Eulalie, which is French. A Spanish princess is justly entitled to a Spanish name.

Gratifying results are reported from the first trip of the new cruiser New York which took place from Delaware Breakwater to Boston. The run was a successful one in every respect, and it is expected that the official trial will demonstrate that the United States now possesses the fastest armored cruiser in the world.

As might be expected Governor Pennoyer of Oregon has expressed himself on the Chinese situation, and he has expressed himself as might have been expected. Governor Pennoyer's method of attaining notoriety ignores the quality of the notice he seeks to attract.

RELIGIOUS WORLD.

Notes and Comments by the Rev. Jas. B. Greer, D. D.

The Episcopal convention has changed the canon so as to permit women to vote at parish meetings.

The Bishop of Winchester, Dr. Thorold, dedicates a volume of sermons just published, to "the dear memory of Phillips Brooks . . . strong, fearless, tender, eloquent, incapable of meanness, blazing with indignation at all kinds of wrong, his heart and mind deep and wide as the ocean at his door, simple and transparent as a child, keen with all the keenness of his race." This is but one of the many tributes to the late Bishop emanating from great men on the other side of the water. Few Americans ever won from the English such warm and unaffected appreciation.

It was a remarkable and thrilling story which with the interest, simplicity and modesty Mr. Percy Alden told at the Presbyterian church last Sunday night of the work carried on at the Mansfield College settlement in East London. That a young man only three years out of the theological seminary should have put himself in sympathetic touch with 10,000 working men, should have gathered about him fifteen or more sympathetic and efficient helpers, most of them college men and women, should have brought light and comfort into thousands of homes and should have accomplished so much for the religious, moral, social and political regeneration of the district constitutes, also, other I am inclined to think, an unparalleled achievement in the annals of philanthropic work.

The annual meeting of the American McAll Association was held in the Emmanuel Baptist Church, Albany, on April 26 and 27. The McAll Mission is too well known to require from us any explanation of its methods of operation. It has been to Paris and France in many respects far more than the Salvation Army has been to London and England. A Paris mob, if not more degraded, is far more unmanageable, than that of the lowest classes of London. The London "submerged tenth" is stupid; that of Paris, wild, defiant, believing neither in God nor man. Among such people Mr. McAll, in a very humble way, began his work, and its story reads like a new chapter in the Acts of the Apostles. Whole districts in Paris and France have experienced what may be called almost a spiritual revolution. At the anniversary at Albany addresses were made by various workers, and many interesting facts were made prominent. The French government has shown its sense of the worth of McAll's services by making him a Knight of the Legion of Honor, a token of respect but once before shown on account of similar service, that once being when Oberlin received the same decoration by order of Louis XVIII. The work is carried on not only by mission halls, but by boats which navy along the rivers; by mission work in the soldiers' dispensaries, open-air preaching and mission to the children.

The logic that underlies such Christian effort of to-day is summed up in a saying of Principal Fairbairn's, the head of Mansfield College, under whom Mr. Alden was trained:

> The gospel of common sense and common humanity is unfriendly to common immorality, and whatever is unfriendly to common morality is hostile to the righteousness of man with God. . . . Give them pure gas, fit for water, short, wholesome food, we contribute to their character and moral improvement, and by contributing to their character, or moral improvement, we contribute to the possibility of their Christian perfection.

It will not do for a certain type of evangelical preachers to forget that this is logical for a sentimental or heretical saying.

Says The Christian Register:

Mr. Gladstone knew how to return good for evil. He is to-day said to be grappling out of his way to speak kindly of the noble speech of Joseph Chamberlain's son, which, to us, with a gracious Low, was one that could fall from dear and fit to belong to a father's heart. Chamberlain, at the first mention of his name, lifted his head and replied in terms of generous appreciation. We have sometimes, during world-course, hesitated for an instant to think upon the than a school, scale or Eton, and covered his face with his hands for folly and coolness. Those upon him and the way to pattern men in happy, whom and some other incidents considering that Mr. Chamberlain's speech was in the exclusions of Unionists against the Grand Old Man.

The work of the Central Board of Toronto says in its report to the Ontario government that out of 2,000 children brought to Canada by Miss Macpherson, Dr. Barnardo, Mr. Quarrier and others, from Great Britain, only 5 per cent. have turned into crime. As these children were nearly all homeless waifs gathered in London and other great cities, the greatness of the results viewed from the standpoint of Christianity or humanity or political economy are most inspiring. Where is romance realized more than in this work for neglected children?

Says The Congregationalist:

The work of the Lord's kingdom in New Orleans is so far completed that the editors of the Southwestern Presbyterian have time to write editor column editorial against scandals, "so speaking and praying as a profession of religious meeting." The W. T. U. and the Y. P. S. C. E. are troubling the Presbyterian waters down there more than the lottery or the prize fight.

St. Bartholomew's Church of New York City (Dr. Greer's) on a recent Sunday took up a collection of $77,89 to pay for improving and enlarging the church. Dr. Greer told the people that in the four years of his rectorship, the Church had raised $1,000,000 for charitable purposes, and might now well be inclined to do something for itself.

Said a little girl in Phillips Brooks' parish, when told of the Bishop's death, by her mother, "How glad the angels will be."

Dr. Barrows waxes warm in his admiration of the prospects opened by the Congress of Religions at Chicago this summer. It is worth the whole cost of the meeting to have the idea of human fraternity so widely advertised. He says:

> It is now confidently expected that representatives of the leading historic faiths will be present in the parliament. A Confucian scholar has been commissioned by the Chinese government to attend. Buddhist scholars, representing both the Northern and Southern Church, among them Rev. Zitsuzen Ashitsu, editor of a Buddhist magazine in Tokyo; a high priest of Shintoism. Modern scholars from India, Parsees from Bombay, representatives of various types of Hinduism, eminent Christian missionaries, leading scholars from Europe and America, and probably representatives of the Russian, Armenian and Bulgarian churches—will all have part in his great meeting. Rev. H. Adler, Chief Rabbi of the British Empire, suggests as a text for the parliament the words of the Hebrew prophet: "Have we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us?" It is surely something unparalleled in history to find co-operating in one religious movement, then as directors, Mr. Gladstone, Cardinal Gibbons, Justice Ameer Ali of Calcutta, H. R. H. Prince Chandradat Chudadhja, Bankok, Siam; Cat, Madjo Prochet of Rome; Professor Max Muller of Oxford; Professor Dr. Harnack of Berlin; Dr. Miller of the Christian college, Madras; the Bishop of Worcester, the First Secretary of the Chinese Legation in Washington, D. C.; Messrs. Parez, Professor Breston of the University of France; Dr. James Martineau; Dr. Ellinwood, the eminent Secretary of Presbyterian Missions; Professor Von Orelli of Basle; Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia; Dr. Alador Szalo of Budapest; Dr. Lunn of the Review of the Churches; the Dean of Canterbury; Dr. Wahlenstrom of Sweden; the editor of The Hindu; Professor Moulton of Cambridge; Lord Egerton of Tatton, Ecclesiastical Commissioner of Great Britain; Rev. Hugh Price Hughes; Count d'Alvella; Professor Banyin Nanjio; Mr. Mozoomdar; Professor Simon of Edinburgh; General William Booth; the editors of Buddhist periodicals; Count A. Bernstorff of Berlin; Professor J. Henry Thayer of Harvard; members of the Society of Friends; Rev. John Worcester of the New Jerusalem Church; Seid Ali Bilgrami, Director of Mission to His Highness the Nizam's government in the Deccan; Professor Riddel of Newcastle; Rev. J. T. Gracey, D. D., President of the International Missionary Union; Professor Francis Balogh of the Reformed Theological School of Debreczen; professors in the universities of Utrecht and Leipzig, and disciples of Zoroaster in Bombay. It is evident that the fellowship between all these men of many faiths and nations is not the unscriptural fellowship of light and darkness, but the loving brotherhood of a common humanity, blessed with different degrees of spiritual illumination. "The sky is not the roof that covers but one family." "The proposed conference," writes Professor Bruce, of Yale University, "will no doubt tend to remove prejudice, promote friendliness, and further the belief that all truth is from God, and that all religion, as it subjective experience, is a disclosure, however imperfect, of the abiding presence of the living God in the souls of his children."

In their recent explorations in Tibet Captain Bower and Dr. Thorold passed a chain of salt lakes, one of which, Tso Ba Tin, has an elevation of 17,000 feet above sea level, and is probably the highest lake in the world.

GREAT BUILDINGS.

THOSE TO BE SEEN AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Towers, Domes, Spires, Minarets, Giant Roofs, Ornamental Columns and Lofty Statuary. A Look at the State Buildings and Also Those Erected by Foreign Countries—The Decoration.

Written for The Gazette, May 17.—(Special.)—Let us see what we can see in a day's run through the Exposition. It will be a good load, measured by the hundreds of buildings and beauties and novelties, very little compared with the sum total of things there to see. Assume that we enter the inclosure at the Fifty-seventh street entrance, where the electric elevated road has its terminus. For a time we may ride about the grounds, but we choose to walk, that we may the better see. It is early in the morning of a fine day, and the bracing air of the lake makes us feel strong enough to take in the entire exposition in a single day—so we bravely set out on foot.

The first glance about inspires us to unwonted energy. In the foreground is a cluster of beautiful buildings. The state buildings—the individual contributions of the states of the Union to the World's fair. Instantly our opinion of the vastness of the United States, of the importance, wealth and grandeur of its component commonwealths, rises many degrees. So numerous are these state buildings, and so numerous, that we scarcely know which first to enter, and in the end we quicken our pace and hasten along and glance at their exterior, coming another day to behold their interiors. It is well that we reached this decision, for when we regret to think that all but one of the forty-four states of the Union are represented, as well as many of the territories, and that ten minutes devoted to each building would consume an entire day we perceive that it will not do to tarry. At every step we are tempted to linger, for some of these state structures are very handsome, but we press resolutely on. The most we can do to-day is to walk in front of all the buildings.

In fact, we soon alter our plans for the day's jaunt. Just now we have a glimpse past the Art gallery and across the big lagoon toward the southern end of the grounds. The spectacle delights and amazes. The [illegible] filled—not irregularly, confusingly, but with symmetrical and effective arrangement,—with towers, domes, spires, minarets, giant roofs, ornamental columns, lofty statuary. The glory and magnitude of the exposition have dawned upon us. It is so much larger than we even thought it that at once we say: "Well, this first day we'll not go in any of these buildings, but simply walk around and try to get the outer effect of every building on the grounds.

So with this new purpose in mind—it is always well to have some definite purpose or objective point when setting out on a ramble—we turn to the right and pass the buildings erected by South Dakota, Washington, Oregon, Colorado and California, and retrace our steps by Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan. Then passing to the left of the Fifty-seventh street entrance we have Nebraska, North Dakota and Kansas on our left hand, and Georgia, Tennessee, Minnesota, Arkansas and Kentucky on our right. Taking a good look down the avenue of states, to save going twice over the same ground, we behold Utah, Nevada, Idaho, New Mexico and North Carolina, and then turn through the interesting thoroughfare to the south past West Virginia, Virginia, Louisiana, Mississippi and Missouri. Occupying the whole south front of this square are the magnificent buildings of New York and Pennsylvania. As we turn north again through the next street Massachusetts, Vermont, Rhode Island and New Jersey are on our right, Delaware and Maryland on our left. Again reaching the northern avenue we see New Mexico, Arizona, Wyoming, Montana and Iowa on one side, and Connecticut, New Hampshire, Maine and Vermont on the other.

Now we are somewhat tired and sit down near the shore of Lake Michigan to rest. The water, with its moving picture of steamships and pleasure crafts, divides our attention with the splendid view of the Art palace and its annexes behind us. It is 10 o'clock, and since we have been nothing but the Art building and the state structures. Yet when we take the map of the exposition and calculate the distance traveled we find we have walked precisely two and a quarter miles. If this is the scale on which this exposition is built, we say to ourselves, we shall have to be up and doing.

Before us is another group of palaces, more costly and more beautiful, than the state houses. These are the buildings erected by the foreign nations, France, Great Britain, Germany, Mexico and Spain line the lake. Farther back, ranged along winding avenues, and showing beautiful perspectives at every step, are Norway, Sweden, Ecuador, Guatemala, Brazil, Costa Rica, Hayti, East India, Chili, Columbia and several others. Charming are the views here we rush on. Great [illegible] a mile and a half has been necessary to simply see the foreign buildings, and time presses.

Now we take a rapid run around the Fisheries building, though at times we are tempted to enter, and cross the inlet canal and skirt the United States Government building. It is not a large building, as buildings go here, but to go around it requires a walk of nearly half a mile. Another half mile jaunt is necessary to see Uncle Sam's outdoor exhibit—the lifesaving crew, the marine hospital, the harbor and channel buoys and the big guns. We have ourselves a third of a mile by viewing the big brick battleship from the shore.

Here we come to the structure which we have had before our eyes and in our minds all the time. It is the Isolation, the Manufactures and the Liberal Arts. Ever since we entered the grounds it has been looking down upon us with its thirty acres of roof rising so majestically toward the sky, and we are determined to circumnavigate the monster. In the whole we find the perspective one finds before him in the Agora on the western side of the main structure. It seems to be endless. The southern end is even more speck of light, and human beings standing there appear to us as ants. It comes very near being the ideal perspective which runs to a vanishing point. We walk on and on, and when we hardly emerge into the open space in front of the exposition, with the Administration building at one end and the portals by the other, we pause, the half an hour in spite of all our good resolutions.

Finally plucking up courage to leave this matchless spot we note the progress of the hour and abandon our intention to walk entirely around the massive building, contenting ourselves with following the edge of the great fringe which faces Lake Michigan. Then we walk under the Illinois arch, past the Music hall and the Casino and onto the pier which extends into the lake half a mile from the shore. In coming we pass the western end of the Agricultural building, passing for moments on the grim walks of the Habitat Cowboys, and then skirting in quick succession the Indian school house, the building in which Herr Krupp of Essen shows his great guns (stopping a few minutes of course for a peep within), the Leather building and the quaint structure in which the choicest products of the whole world are exhibited. Here we conclude to go no farther south. The car loiters south past the Horticultural building, itself a fifth of a mile in length. We do not stop to visit the green houses nor the Hooden temple which the Japanese have erected here on the lagoon.

A few minutes' walk gives us a view of the Woman's building and of the Illinois state house—the largest structure by the way to be seen on the grounds—and we have completed the grand circuit. We have had a glimpse of every important structure within the inclosure, and are able to say with pride and satisfaction that we appreciate the magnitude and the beauty of the exposition. Our weary limbs speak eloquently to us of the efforts required to reach this knowledge, and gladly do we agree to leave the Midway plaisance or side-show feature of the exposition to another journey. Merely to see the grounds and the exteriors of the buildings we have walked fully eleven miles, and that is enough for one day.

"The Prodigal Father" at the opera house this evening.

Entries for the County school races close on Tuesday evening next.

Messrs. S. Evans and Robert Cathcart are in the city from Marshall, Mo.

The Great Mountain Falls hotel is to open for the season on the 15th of June.

The last live bird shoot of the season will take place at the Country club at 2:30 p. m. today.

Mrs. Charles S. Sprague and children have returned from their California trip and are at The Antlers.

The Rock Island fast car made its appearance a day earlier than usual but was heartily welcomed yesterday.

Mr. Geo. T. Hall of Denver, traveling passenger agent of the Pennsylvania lines, was in the city yesterday on business.

Mr. M. J. Collins of the Cripple Creek Crusher, and Marshal Ed Wilson of Cripple Creek came down from camp last evening.

Mrs. Oliver Watrous has been at Cripple Creek for the past year, returned to the camp yesterday after a visit spent a week with friends in the city.

A special meeting of the Colorado Springs Athletic society will be held at [illegible] Thursday evening, May 25, at 8 o'clock. There is important business and a full attendance is desired.

Captain J. M. Johnson, formerly a prominent Kansas lawyer, has entered into partnership with Police Magistrate C. S. Adams to practice law in this city.

A crowd of women and children watched a woman, who had a shawl, costs by Justice Walker yesterday.

The graduating exercises of the Colorado City High school occur this evening. There are two graduates. Dr. Snyder of the State Normal school is expected to deliver the address.

The colored man who froze his feet and hands at Hayden Divide last winter and who has been at the county house ever since, has been sent to the old soldiers' home at Leavenworth, Kas.

Mr. Henry H. Wolbert returned to his home in Delta last evening after a visit of several days in the city. Mr. Wolbert is connected with the leading bank in Delta and is enthusiastic over the great fruit district of the western slope.

It is probable that the city will dispose of its $20,000, 4 per cent. bonds at par. This will be a good idea in view of the present financial conditions in the East and the fact that the rate of interest is much lower than that ever carried by the city's bonds in previous issues.

The Aspen delegation of the G. A. R. which has been attending the Pueblo State encampment, stopped in the city yesterday. They were accompanied by the Winfield Scott Post No. 16 drum corps. The playing of the drum corps on the streets yesterday morning attracted a large crowd of people while they were serenading THE GAZETTE.

The County Commissioners are going to Turkey Creek the first of the coming week to look up the new road. They state that so far not a man from that part of the county has mentioned a new road to them. Before they can take steps to build a road anywhere it is necessary that a petition be presented and that it go through the proper legal form.

Mrs. H. L. Altman's residence, No. 332 West Costilla street, burned at 6 o'clock yesterday morning. The fire caught from a falling stove pipe, and the little frame building burned rapidly. The loss was about $400, with no insurance. The alarm was given by the furious blowing of the railroad engine whistles. The Jacksons put the first water on the fire.

Justice Shideler had a novel experience while trying a criminal case on Thursday. In the midst of the evidence a man and woman came in and explained that they wanted to be married and that they were in a hurry. The justice obligingly suspended the trial and made the twain one, while the prisoner at the bar witnessed the ceremony.

One of our local attorneys has had an experience in book buying that will probably teach him to patronize regular merchants hereafter. He purchased the International Dictionary from an agent and paid $16 for it as it was represented that he could not get it of the regular dealers. An inquiry at the stores shows him that he could have purchased the same book for $10.

A very artistic oil painting by Mr. Chas. Craig was displayed in Holbrook & Perkins's window yesterday. It is entitled "The Ute at Home," and represents the Indian sitting upon his horse in front of his tepee. Nearby is the ever-present dog, the squaws and the papoose. It is a very good subject and Mr. Craig has treated it skillfully, truthfully and attractively. A smaller painting from the same sketch is to be sent to the Duchess of Buckingham.

The North park walks are gradually being restored to a condition fit for public travel. The ditches have been dug out so that the water may run about the trees and the walks are being covered with loam and rolled hard. The job is not entirely completed, however, and one citizen, rather than walk on the gravel started across the grass where the sign says, "Keep Off." To an officer he was ingenuous and said "he'd rather pay a fine, than walk on such a miserable walk," and he did. In police court it was $1 and costs, amounting to $5.75. The citizens of North Nevada, Weber and Wahsatch are talking of raising a purse to reimburse the fine to the man who had the courage to walk across the grass and pay a fine rather than use such a disreputable walk as they have been obliged to endure for nearly a year.
